— IT'S VALENTINE'S DAY —
MIX YOUR DARLIN'
A DRINK.

Find classic recipes inside or visit us in-store.

SHOW YOUR SWEETHEART SOME SOUTHERN HOSPITALITY.

It's the golden age of cocktails, y'all. These indispensable mixing accessories bring out the distinct flavours that give each southern classic its spirit. Learn how to serve your guy or gal a cocktail with just the right amount of southern flair.

THE MUDDLER

If an Old-Fashioned is your drink of choice, you'll see the need for a muddler right away: it breaks down the sugars, fruit and the oils in the herb leaves to bring the flavour out. While many people will use a separate glass, try muddling directly in the vessel you're drinking from. The oils will get trapped in the glass, which ultimately sets up our palate.

CITRUS PRESS

Mixing cocktails with fresh fruit just instantly takes you down south, and a citrus press makes it easy to make juice to order. The flavour profile of a cocktail made with fresh juice is completely different. Of course, when it comes to fruit, the fresher the better. Not only does it taste better, it smells better, too.

Screwdriver

THE JIGGER (AND PONY)

If you want to be a responsible bartender, a jigger will help ensure your drinks don't end up stronger than they need to be. On the one side is a cup that holds exactly 1-1/2 ounces – that's the jigger. The other side holds a half-ounce, which is referred to as the pony. Really, the only mistake you can make with a jigger is not using one.

Dancing with Ellen

Hélène Campbell. Twenty-one-year-old has been busy public speaking, wants to establish residence in Toronto for patients waiting for transplants

Hélène Campbell will be flying to California to appear as a guest on the Ellen DeGeneres Show next week. The 21-year-old Barhaven resident, who spearheaded a global organ-donation awareness campaign on Twitter last year, has her plane tickets ready and is excited to finally dance with DeGeneres. Campbell received a double-lung transplant last April in Toronto after being diagnosed with idiopathic pulmonary fibrosis. While on the waiting list, she vowed to dance with DeGeneres in person after she appeared on the show via Skype last February. She will sit next to De-Generes on stage at a taping on Monday — exactly one year and two days after DeGeneres's first Skype chat with Campbell. "No idea," said Campbell Wednesday morning when asked what she has planned for her much-anticipated appearance. "Hopefully dancing." "Ellen has been someone that I've always really loved, and looked up to, and find really inspirational." "It's a platform definitely to raise awareness for such a good cause and she helped out with that." Campbell's interview with DeGeneres will be aired Tuesday. "I'm glad I'm going now. I get to get away from the cold," said Campbell with a laugh. Other family members will be in the audience as well, Campbell said.

Hélène Campbell is surprised by talk-show host Ellen DeGeneres during a Skype interview that aired on television Feb. 16, 2012. Campbell is scheduled to appear on the show in person next week. For more on Campbell and what she's been working on, go to metronews.ca. METRO/SCREENSHOT/YOUTUBE.COM

Flag flap. Tattered Canadian flag replaced at gravesite of Lester B. Pearson

A tattered Canadian flag that had been flying at former Prime Minister Lester B. Pearson's gravesite was promptly replaced Wednesday after Parks Canada was notified of its shabby condition.

On Tuesday, Metro notified the agency of the weathered flag flying over the grave of the Prime Minister who introduced the maple leaf design to Canadians in 1965.

A news tip led Metro to the Wakefield, Que. cemetery Tuesday where Pearson is buried.

Parks Canada, the agency responsible for the National Program for the Grave Sites of Canadian Prime Ministers, said Tuesday it was unaware of the flag's condition and would replace it as soon as possible.

Saving the agency embarrassment before the country marks National Flag Day of Canada on Friday, cemetery staff replaced the flag with a new one, a spokeswoman said.

After reading about the flag, LiVE 88.5 radio station hosts decided they wanted to replace it before Flag Day.

"We were a little surprised at how bad the flag

Live 88.5 hosts David Schellenberg, Amal Wahab and Katfish Morgan hold up a flag they brought to replace a weather-worn one, inset, that had been flying above the grave of Lester B. Pearson. JOE LOFARO/METRO looked and how nobody was taking care of it," said Katfish Morgan. "We didn't think we should wait until Friday to actually do it and (Lester B. Pearson) deserved better than that."

But, by the time they arrived at the gravesite a brand new flag was already flapping in the wind.

Morgan said the station plans to solicit ideas from listeners about which flag in the city needs replacing with the one the station bought.

Councillors vote for 1.5% raise

Salary freeze over. Not everyone happy about it

ALEX BOUTILLIER
alex.boutillier@metronews.ca

Ottawa city councillors voted themselves a 1.5 per cent raise Wednesday, ending a three-year freeze on council salaries.

Councillors were put in the politically unenviable position of voting on their own compensation after staff's mid-term governance review recommended an annual raise similar to that received by senior management. That equalled about 1.5 per cent last year.

The raise and governance review were approved, but not before councillors debated a motion from Bayward Coun. Mark Taylor that would allow them to voluntarily opt out of the pay hike.

"In my view, this is simply a personal choice," Taylor told reporters. "I think all members of council work exceptionally hard, so I don't begrudge anybody from making the choice that they want to. I simply wanted the ability to make my own."

Capital ward Coun. David Chernushenko chalked the motion up to political posturing, saying that councillors are well, but not overly, compensated.

"We're in this ridiculous situation of having to vote on our own salaries in front of the public. Past councils, all over the world, will always find it more politically convenient to say, 'We'll put that off,'" said Chernushenko.

"This is a job, it's a very tough job, and not a lot of people want to take it on.... I believe it is the right thing that we vote now."

Taylor said his motion aimed to offer councillors a choice, adding he'll be returning his raise to the city. Rideau-Rockcliffe ward Coun. Peter Clark said he will donate his raise to charity.

Bra, shirt cutting justified: Desjourdy defence

Sgt. Steve Desjourdy
JOE LOFARO/METRO

There is little to no evidence anything sexual happened in the 2008 strip search of a drunk woman by Ottawa police Sgt. Steven Desjourdy, said his defence in closing arguments as the officer's sexual-assault trial wrapped up Wednesday.

"The Ottawa Police Service had no procedures for violent or suicidal prisoners at the time," said defence lawyer Michael Edelson, indicating Desjourdy's decision to cut off the woman's shirt and bra was justified because "you've got these scenarios where officers have to respond ad hoc to situations."

Edelson argued Desjourdy only used the force needed to quell the woman who was arrested by police on Sept. 6, 2008, for public intoxication. Throughout her time in police custody she was violent and abusive toward the officers, and the search ensued following a mule-kick that floored one of the cops.

When the case started in late September, Desjourdy pleaded not guilty to sexually assaulting the woman. She cannot be named due to a publication ban.

"The Crown has brought nothing to the table to prove that this was done with a sexual purpose," argued Edelson regarding the shirt and bra cutting and subsequent decision to leave the woman naked in her cell. "My client had the lawful authority to conduct the search."

Without a sexual context, Edelson said, it's difficult to find Desjourdy guilty of sexual assault.

Crown prosecutor Christopher Webb shot back at the defence, quoting from the alleged victim, who said, "I felt sexually violated after having my clothes cut off."

The Crown's case comes down to proving the search and the cutting of the clothes was done to punish and humiliate her, said Judge Tim Lipson, who is set to pass judgment on the case April 3.

Rent arrears. Mayfair Theatre Orleans shuttered

The Mayfair Theatre in Orleans closed its doors to film buffs in the suburbs Wednesday due to rent troubles after more than a year of operation following expansion there in 2011.

"The landlord just ran out of patience," said owner Lee Demarbre. "It's been a lot of emotion over the past year. It comes down to rent and we made the mistake of thinking we could open and be successful on Day 1. We needed a year to be open for people in Orleans to find out we're here."

The Orleans location's financial troubles almost shuttered it in early 2012, and over the summer Demarbre began a campaign to help raise money to replace the Bank Street location's 35-mm projectors with new $45,000 digital models that have become the industry standard.

The timing couldn't be worse, said Demarbre, since traffic in January and February has been the highest he's seen since they opened. "Two hundred people were showing up every night for Lincoln for a whole week. We finally got the support from the community that we needed. But we owed back rent."

Alleged incidents in '70s

Retired priest charged with indecent assault

Ottawa police have charged a retired Roman Catholic priest with indecent assault against a seven-year-old 40 years ago.

The charges come after a three-month investigation into an alleged "series of inappropriate contacts" between a Roman Catholic priest and a boy in Ottawa from 1971 to 1973.

Jacques Faucher, 76, faces one count of gross indecency and one count of indecent assault. He will appear in court on Thursday for a bail hearing, and the investigation is ongoing.

Police are urging anyone with information about this incident, or similar incidents, to contact the sexual-abuse unit at 613-236-1222 ext. 5944.

Lacing up. Romance of Rideau Canal draws skate troupe for event featuring moves, music

GRAHAM LANKTREE
graham.lanktree@metronews.ca

Before ice hockey, before figure skating, a favourite pastime of Canadians in the 19th century was to take their beau or belle out on the ice to skate and hold their hand.

For Thursday a skating dance troupe from Montreal plans to skate the Rideau Canal to bring the spirit of that time back for Valentine's Day.

"Last year loads of couples came. I think some got made there too," said Alexandre Hamel, leader of the Le Patin Libre troupe that staged an impromptu dance party on the canal Feb. 14, 2012, which showed off their virtuoso skating skills and got their audience dancing.

"I think it's one of the most romantic places in Canada. You're gliding. It's human bodies in motion. It's the pleasure someone can feel holding someone by hand and it creates a bubble around them."

The ice dancers will show the audience a few steps and how to get into the groove of shaking your booty on a slippery surface. "If you feel the music, it's accessible to anybody," Hamel said, adding Montreal's DJ JB will be spinning dance music. They will also show off their own acrobatic moves in a 15-minute skate.

Last year the National Capital Commission almost put an end to the romance when it attempted to cancel the event before it began, he said.

"They were quoting words like 'safety,'" said Hamel. "But it's a super-safe activity. They just want to be in control of anything programmed on the canal."

Hamel said it was demand from University of Ottawa students that brought the event back this year. "We think the tradition will grow every year from now. It's all free. It's our lifestyle, we're dancers."

Skaters are asked to join the four-member troupe and their DJ at 9 p.m. on the ice near the Pretoria Bridge.

Just too much? New blog exposes troubling remarks

Female premiers face war of words. 'I think this kind of behaviour needs to be shamed,' says owner who hates hateful speech

LUKE SIMCOE
Metro Online

Ontario Premier Kathleen Wynne is "a lesbian tree hugger."

Quebec Premier Pauline Marois, "a dumb b—."

And depending on who you ask, B.C.'s Christy Clark needs to either button up her shirt or simply take it off.

These are the kinds of tweets, Facebook posts and comments you'll find collected at Madam Premier, a new blog dedicated to exposing the vitriol hurled at Canada's female first ministers.

"Their jobs are hard enough without having to be criticized on the basis of their gender," says the blog's owner, Diamond Isinger.

"If I wasn't already involved, this certainly wouldn't encourage me to enter into public life or electoral politics."

A resident of Vancouver, Isinger started the blog Tuesday night. By Wednesday afternoon, nearly 3,000 people had visited.

The blog is part of a new "naming and shaming" tactic, where activists point fingers at those posting hateful speech online.

Last year, a Toronto feminist made headlines for identifying the man behind a violent and misogynistic video game. Shortly after, a Calgary man was fired from his job for mocking bullied teen Amanda Todd on Facebook.

"Sunlight is the best disinfectant," Isinger said. "I think this kind of behaviour needs to be shamed."

A surprising number of comments — most of which are profane or sexual — appear to be posted under people's real names.

"It signals that we have a culture that's comfortable with this kind of thing. People feel they can say this stuff without repercussion," said Isinger.

York University's Dr. Jennifer Jenson says that by aggregating misogynistic comments, blogs like Madam Premier show that sexism is still a systemic problem.

"It's about compiling it so that it doesn't seem like it's just one guy doing this," she said. "When you see it this way, it's a literal documentation of the different kinds of people who feel compelled to say derogatory things about women in power."

Jenson says online comments made about female politicians often differ from those directed at men.

"We never say, 'Did you see the bulge in the premier's pants?'"

Follow Obama, Canada told

President Barack Obama's State of the Union message to act swiftly on climate change is a challenge to Ottawa as well, says the U.S. ambassador to Canada.

Obama used Tuesday's speech to present Congress with a choice: Either agree to market-based solutions to climate change, or else the president will use his executive powers to achieve the same result.

Ambassador David Jacobson said the message was meant as much for Canada as it was for the United States.

Tirbany, a married father of three, alleged he was threatened with being sodomized.

Can these words cause a crash?

A University of Alberta researcher wants to put the brakes on billboards with negative words.

Michelle Chan put fellow students into a driving simulator and tested their skills behind the wheel.

The test asked subjects to drive down a computer-generated road as ads appeared with negative, positive and neutral words.

Words such as cancer, war and abuse caused most of the drivers to veer outside their lane. Some drivers crashed into trees, other vehicles and pedestrians.

"Billboards are already distracting enough," said Chan. "But then when you add the negative emotional content, it ... can be detrimental to driving."

Foreign Affairs Minister John Baird, pictured in the Commons Wednesday, says Canada will remain a zombie-free zone. ADRIAN WYLD/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Tories at war ... with zombies

Will zombies ever take over Parliament Hill?

Never! Foreign Affairs Minister John Baird is on the case.

Baird assured the House of Commons that Canada remains a zombie-free zone.

The odd exchange came Wednesday near the end of the daily question period.

Winnipeg New Democrat Pat Martin raised the matter of a Quebec government disaster-planning exercise that used a mock zombie invasion as its premise.

B-movie templates of an invasion of the "living dead" have also been used for emergency preparedness drills in the United States.

"I don't need to tell you, Mr. Speaker, that zombies don't recognize borders," Martin warned the House, tongue firmly in cheek.

Is Baird, asked the NDP MP, working with his American partners "to develop an international zombie strategy so that a zombie invasion does not turn into a zombie apocalypse?"

Baird rose to the occasion, telling the House that he was "dead-icated" to the matter.

"Under the leadership of this prime minister, Canada will never become a safe haven for zombies, ever," said Baird.

To gamble is not divine, says Quebec lotto commission

Papal search. Betting on the new pope ruled out as bookies deem French-Canadian cardinal a top pick

All bets are off in Quebec as to whether a local becomes the next pope.

The provincial lottery commission says it will not follow the lead of some foreign gambling houses that allow people to place bets on who might inherit St. Peter's throne.

The organization isn't swayed by the fact that a fellow Quebecer, Cardinal Marc Ouellet, just so happens to be the favourite or among the top picks, according to bookmakers.

While Loto-Quebec recently branched out beyond sports gambling by introducing betting on the upcoming ing Oscars, a spokesman said Wednesday it has no plans to get into religion.

"Loto-Quebec has no intention to offer betting on the identity of the next pope," said spokesman Jean-Pierre Roy. "I don't think that's what people would expect from a government organization."

Roy said sports gambling has been a fixture since the early 1990s. In recent weeks, the corporation has been testing the waters on betting on the Oscars and Roy says it will only know after the Feb. 24 ceremony whether it was a hit. The Atlantic Lottery Corp. was the first to announce it would offer Oscar betting this year.

"But betting on a religious event, we're not sure that would be the best way to go," Roy said.

Since Pope Benedict XVI's surprise announcement on Monday that he will step down on Feb. 28, Quebecers have weighed in on whether Ouellet could be next in line.

Ouellet, the 68-year-old native of La Motte, Que., was named a cardinal in 2003. In 2010 he was made head of the powerful Congregation for Bishops, which vets bishops nominations worldwide.

Russia plans to continue shipping arms to Syria

Russia will keep supplying weapons to Syrian President Bashar Assad's regime despite the country's escalating civil war, the head of Russia's state arms trader said Wednesday.

Anatoly Isaikin, the director of Rosoboronexport, said Russia sees no need to stop its arms trade with Syria as the trade isn't prohibited by the United Nations. He dismissed western criticism of Russian arms sales to Assad's regime, saying his company has only delivered defensive weapons.

Russia also held out the prospect of bringing the two sides in the Syrian conflict together for talks. "We are prepared to provide the venue for Syrian talks if they want to meet in Moscow," said Mikhail Bogdanov, a deputy foreign minister. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Bill would extend immigration rules to gay couples

The head of the U.S. Senate Judiciary Committee wants the government to start affording gay married couples the same immigration benefits that heterosexual couples now enjoy.

On Wednesday, Sen. Patrick Leahy, a Democrat, introduced the Uniting Families Act, a bill that would provide spousal immigration benefits to same-sex couples. Leahy discussed the bill briefly during a committee hearing on immigration reform.

Because the federal government does not currently recognize same-sex marriages, U.S. citizens cannot sponsor their same-sex partners for immigration benefits, including green cards.

The Supreme Court is set to take up three gay-marriage cases later this year. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Plane crash in Ukraine leaves 4 dead

Champion's League match. Passengers on wrecked flight were headed to big game

Bad reputation

- In recent years, former Soviet republics have had some of the world's worst air-traffic safety records. Experts blame that record on aircraft age, weak government controls, poor pilot training and a cost-cutting mentality.

A passenger plane carrying soccer fans headed for a match skidded past the landing strip and overturned in the eastern Ukrainian city of Donetsk on Wednesday, killing four people, injuring two and leaving the fate of two others unknown, officials said.

The small, Soviet-designed AN-24 plane was carrying 45 people from the Black Sea port of Odessa, according to emergency officials. It was not immediately clear what caused the crash landing, Emergency Situations Ministry spokeswoman Inna Sedova told The Associated Press. The plane was operated by the small Southern Airlines company, which mostly runs domestic flights out of Odessa.

Sedova said that four people have been confirmed dead, two were injured and the fate of two others remains unknown.

Donetsk Gov. Andrei

Shishatsky said that rescuers had located one of the missing people in the wreckage of the plane but were still unsure whether the person was alive, the Interfax news agency reported. Interfax also quotes surviving passenger Dmitry Verbitsky as saying that the plane had caught fire during the crash landing, but it was quickly put out.

Shishatsky spokeswoman Rimma Fil said that most of the passengers were likely heading for Wednesday night's Champions League soccer match between Ukraine's Shakhtar and Borussia Dortmund. The match opened with a minute of silence in memory of the dead.

Wonky ship will be out of commission through April, Carnival says

Not such a Triumph. Cruise line nixes 12 more voyages aboard ship stranded in Gulf

Carnival Cruise Lines has cancelled voyages through April aboard the Triumph, a ship that has been plagued by mechanical problems in recent weeks and was finally left powerless in the Gulf of Mexico after an engine-room fire.

Carnival's announcement of the 12 cancelled trips came Wednesday as the Triumph was being towed by two tugboats to a port in Mobile, Ala., with more than 4,000 people on board, some of whom have told relatives that conditions on the ship are dismal and that they have limited access to food and bathrooms. Two other cruises were called off shortly after Sunday's fire.

Carnival disputes accounts that the ship is filthy, saying it's doing everything to make sure passengers are comfortable.

Weather permitting, the Triumph should arrive in Mobile sometime Thursday.

Debby Smedley, a passenger on a recent Triumph cruise, said the ship had trouble on Jan. 28 as it was preparing to leave Galveston, Texas. Hours before the scheduled departure time, she received an email from Carnival stating the vessel would leave late because of a propulsion problem. Passengers were asked to arrive at the port at 2 p.m., two hours later than originally scheduled.

Belgium criticized over conflict diamonds

Easing restrictions.
Country claims concern is for Zimbabweans, monitoring group sees profit motive

A world monitoring group on conflict diamonds said Wednesday it wants restrictions on the sale of Zimbabwe diamonds tightened after calls to relax them by diamond companies in Belgium.

Belgium has argued the controls hurt revenue filtering down to ordinary Zimbabweans. But Global Witness insisted in a statement circulated Wednesday the European nation's interests were "closer to home" in its diamond centre of Antwerp that promotes diamond gifts around Valentine's Day.

The eastern Zimbabwe fields of Marange, where diamonds are mined, have long been mired in allegations of killings, human-rights violations and corruption.

The group warned against what it called "a love triangle" between Belgium, its diamond dealers and Zimbabwe.

"European Union members seeking to promote democracy and stability in Zimbabwe should avoid a menage-a-trois with Belgium and its diamond dealers this Valentine's Day," it said.

Context

Global Witness said any easing of curbs on Zimbabwe's diamond industry would likely mean more cash for Zimbabwe President Robert Mugabe's loyalist police and military just months before elections. Mugabe's party has a history of violence and intimidation surrounding elections.

It said Belgium is pressing for a European Union embargo on Zimbabwe Mining Development Corporation — at the forefront of diamond sales — to be lifted immediately.

Global Witness called for the corporation to remain strictly bound by European restrictions and said Anjin, a Chinese joint-venture diamond-mining company with links to senior Zimbabwean military officials, should be added to the European sanctions list, along with Sam Pa, a powerful Chinese mining magnate accused of involvement in illicit diamond trading.

EU foreign ministers are scheduled to meet Monday to review the bloc's economic restrictions on Zimbabwe after years of human-rights violations and political and economic turmoil. But union officials say any relaxation of the measures will depend on the holding of a credible referendum on a new constitution slated for March or April and parliamentary and presidential elections later in the year.

"The European Union should hold a steady course and restrict trade with diamond-mining operations in Marange until free and fair elections have taken place," Global Witness said.

A Halifax communications company is now competing with some of Canada's wireless giants.

Card payments. Retailers misled: Watchdog

A federal consumer watchdog says some credit and debit card payment companies are breaking rules it created to protect retailers, which in turn could be costing Canadians more money.

The Financial Consumer Agency of Canada issued a warning to the industry on Wednesday that it will not tolerate payment companies who mislead merchants into paying hidden fees or lock them into confusing contracts.

The concerns stem from a code of conduct introduced by the federal government nearly three years ago designed to encourage further clarity in the contracts signed between retailers and credit and debit card companies.

But the agency said it found some payment companies, who it did not name, have been misrepresenting the terms of contracts with merchants by advertising and promising rates that they were unable to honour.

A WRITTEN HISTORY OF ST. VALENTINE

HE SAYS...
John Mazerolle
metronews.ca

One little known fact about me (along with every other fact) is that I am a Valentine's Day history buff. This is why so many women I've spent Valentine's Day with have told me, "You're history." Their words, not mine.

It's a fascinating topic.

By looking back at the origins of Valentine's Day, we can see how it overcame its humble beginnings as a 14th-century Coca-Cola promotion to become the genuine and understated holiday we know and love today, giving birth to some of the great poetry and art of our time.

The history of Valentine's Day: From mass decapitation to mass duplication:

Ralph Wiggum syndrome

With its perfect pre-Hollywood combo of romance and violence, Valentine's Day became increasingly popular. The biggest breakthrough came in 1584 when journeyman poet William Shakespeare wrote "Bee my Valentine" next to a picture of a bee.

guished loves and several brutal wars. All was fair in both cases, and nobody ever had to say they were sorry.

The dismal state of affairs (most of the cards ended with the clunky "Be My Lupercalia") eventually changed with the birth of three different men named Valentine, a glorified soul considered so important to God that He built in double-redundancy. The three saints Valentine were very different people, but they all shared one romantic trait: They were all brutally executed.

This, of course, dovetails nicely with our perception of modern love. Since their beheadings, the most perfect loves in fiction have always ended in death (Romeo and Juliet, Rose and Jack, Teen Angel and Narrator), leaving many husbands and wives to wish their romances could end so perfectly.

A number of legends have grown around the executions of St. Valentine(s), not all of them true, but it's clear their deaths gave rise to several famous romance-related phrases.

For instance, it's well documented that the grand executioner began each decapitation with the solemn proclamation: "It's not you, it's me."

Also, each saint's head tended to fall on his twitching feet, leading to the well-known phrase "head over heels." ("To wear your heart on your sleeve" also came about then, but it's best not to get into details.)

With its perfect pre-Hollywood combo of romance and violence, Valentine's Day became increasingly popular. The biggest breakthrough came in 1584 when journeyman poet William Shakespeare wrote "Bee my Valentine" next to a picture of a bee. This brilliant bit of wordplay took off on Reddit, leading to fame and fortune for Shakespeare, despite claims of copyright infringement by user Francis Bacon.

Combined with the invention of the Gutenberg Laserjet Printer, spreading love around the world was soon as simple as plunking down $8.95. By 2012, for the first time ever the illness that is love could spread worldwide just as quickly as love-related illnesses.

The poets of the past would be uncharacteristically speechless if they could see how easy sharing the perfect words has become. Though I think if Shakespeare were here today, he'd probably say, "What a time to bee alive. Or if not alive, to buzz off."

I'd love to see him top that.

And they call it guppy love

CLELIA GASPARINI/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Advice from a guppy

Choose an ugly wingman to make yourself shine

When it comes to mating, guppies treasure their ugly friends — because they look so good by comparison.

An article published Wednesday by Britain's Royal Society says that male guppies prefer to associate with their drab-coloured counterparts when females are around.

"Males actively choose the social context that maximizes their relative attractiveness," the article said. Or, as lead author Clelia Gasparini put it: "If you are surrounded by ugly friends, you look better."

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The dating game

- Mating rituals. An aquarium was set up with one female in partition on either end. Guppy bachelorette No. 1 had two attractive, brightly coloured males placed on either side of her. Guppy bachelorette No. 2 was stuck with uglier, drab-coloured fish.

- The ugly guppy. When a male guppy was put in the middle of the tank, and given the choice of which female to approach, bachelorette No. 2 was the more popular pick, with male guppies spending about 62 per cent of their time hanging around her side of the aquarium.

Plenty of fish

Ugly guppy plays matchmaker

The researchers also found that the time guppies spent with the guppy that was surrounded by ugly fish correlated with their unattractiveness. The uglier the guppy, the less likely it was that he would hang around the brightly coloured fish placed next to bachelorette No. 1.

Because it could be argued that guppies avoided their brightly coloured pals because attractive fish were more aggressive, or because predators were more likely to spot them, the experiment was repeated. Researchers ran it without any females, and again with the lights in the male enclosures turned down so that the test guppies couldn't see them.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Only human

"As a researcher I cannot compare human mating systems with the guppies' one. But if you ask me as a person, sure.... I saw this tactic working pretty well with humans.... If you want to impress someone, do you think you will look more attractive in comparison with Mr. Bean or George Clooney?"

It sounds authentic because it is. Acoustic performances, whether busking in my hometown or on YouTube, are how I got started. Songs and performances like that really give me the chance to connect with my fans. That connection is why I perform an acoustic set as part of my Believe Tour every night.

Does this bring us closer to the "real" Justin?

I think everything I put out is a representation of the real me. But this album (Believe Acoustic) definitely allows the public to see a different side of me than Believe. The sound of this album is a lot rawer and more exposed.

I ask because previous stars your age — Timberlake, Britney — usually start to define their sound for an older audience around this time. Where are you going?

Quoted

"I'm just growing up and my sound is maturing with me. I just write about what is going on in my life."

Justin Bieber, on his new album Believe Acoustic

I'm just growing up and my sound is maturing with me. I don't spend a lot of time planning where my music will go next. I just write about what is going on in my life and how I am feeling and it's causing the music to grow with me in a very organic way.

Lots of guys in dorm rooms everywhere play acoustic guitars to pick up girls and fail, because they look cheesy. What tips do you have for them?
Be confident.

What are you doing this Valentine's Day?

I've got a small break before my U.K. tour dates start so

I'm still figuring it out.

What's the wildest offer you've had from a fan?

I get a lot of marriage proposals.

We have to ask about Nothing Like Us, a song about your break up with Selena Gomez — you told Billboard you're not in the happiest place and have friends to get you through. What have you learned about relationships?
I have learned a lot about who I am and who I want to be.

And?

I've also learned how to be there for someone else.

What comes first, the book or the film?

Adaptations. The original piece of work rules when looking for the premiere way of enjoying a story

As Ang Lee's striking film Life of Pi rides a wave of awards season glory, with 11 Oscar nominations and many other honours, the boy-tiger shipwreck story it's based on is also enjoying a boost.

Saskatoon-based author Yann Martel's Man Booker Prize-winning 2001 novel Life of Pi has been in the Top 20 on the New York Times Best Sellers list (and in the Top 10 several times) every week since the film came out in November.

The question is, are readers taking in the book before seeing the film, or vice versa?

If Martel had his way, it would be the former.

When it comes to book/film adaptations, "One should start with the original work," Martel wrote in a recent email to The Canadian Press, via his publicist.

"So read the novel if it

If Yann Martel had his way, people would be reading Life of Pi before they saw the film. HANDOUT came first (so read Life of Pi the book before seeing the movie) or see the movie first if it was done first (so 2001: A Space Odyssey, which was a movie and then became a book).

"That way you get the originating artist's work in its first format rather than an adaptation."

CBC Radio Writers & Company host Eleanor Wachtel agrees, noting "movies colonize your imagination."

"If you see the movie first and then read the novel, it's virtually impossible to block out the actors who play the characters that you're now reading about," says Wachtel, who also hosts TIFF Bell Lightbox's Books on Film subscription series.

"So if you want to have that primary, intimate experience with a novel, it's much, much better I think to read a book first and then see the film."

In some cases, moviegoers might even have a better understanding or appreciation of a film if they've read the book first, she adds.

"Something like Cloud

Look in a book...

With literary awards, social media platforms, book blogs and websites like Goodreads.com creating much buzz around books these days, it's hard to put off reading a story before its film release, notes Viveca Gretton of the Toronto Public Library. "People want to be part of that reading community," says the librarian. "One of the good things about reading the book is that it's going to take you to other books as well. It might start you on a path of reading similar books or books that interest you."

Atlas, which is quite a stupendous adaptation, I think it's much better to read the novel first," says Wachtel.

"The movie jump-cuts a lot ... but the novel is like six nesting bowls cut in half, each written in a different style, and if you don't read the novel first you won't really be able to appreciate that."

These movies put the zzz's in Oscar buzz

Yawn. While some have said this year's awards race is thrilling, others just want to nap

Nancy Zwiers was genuinely psyched to see Lincoln, but something happened between the ticket purchase and the credits. Off screen, that is.

"Yes, I fell asleep," confessed the 54-year-old marketing executive in Long Beach, Calif. "I only have two clear memories of the movie: a bunch of old white guys sitting around talking and Sally Field in a perpetual state of angst."

That was shortly after its release in October. Fast forward to January and a dozen Academy Award nominations for the 150-minute epic and another accolade has emerged: nap worthy, with and without apologies from the snoozy to Steven Spielberg and Daniel Day-Lewis.

Movie napping is almost certainly as old as cinema itself. Some blame it on soporific popcorn. Others on the darkness.

Any which way, cinematic snoozing seems near epidemic proportions this awards season with Lincoln, the 157-minute sung Les Misérables, the 169-minute The Hobbit: An Unexpected Journey and others cited as good for a snore.

Is it the comfy seats or the films themselves that are testing the alertness of movie nappers? THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Internet is heavy with lists of all-time snoozer movies but rarely is one season so full of them, or so say the nappers.

Tadd Rosenfeld, who heads an employment service, gets plenty of sleep and rarely naps outside of movie theatres.

He's in catch-up mode on

Oscar nominees and said his last in-theatre snooze was The Dark Knight Rises, the latest in the Batman franchise released in July. It won a dozen awards, including one of the American Film Institute's movies of the year and a Hollywood Film Award. Most of his friends loved it.

"But to me it was simply restful. It lost my attention almost straight away, and as my eyelids felt heavier and heavier, I just relaxed into a lower sitting position in the chair, allowing the colourful scenes to unfold as I drifted pleasantly away," Rosenfeld said.

Safe Haven

Director. Lasse Hallstrom

Stars. Josh Duhamel,
Julianne Hough

Josh Duhamel and Julianne Hough are blandly likeable enough but this seventh big-screen adaptation of a Nicholas-Sparks-authored heart flutterer won't find a safe haven from discerning audiences. Simply put, this tale is about a woman seeking sanctuary in a sleepy town who falls for a widower while her psychotic hubby hunts her down. Veteran filmmaker Lasse Hallstrom (Dear John) does his best to mould the melodrama but Safe Haven is still mostly stale and unmistakably safe storytelling.

Beautiful Creatures

Director. Richard LaGravenese

Stars. Alice Englert,

Based on a series of young adult novels, Beautiful Creatures is likely aimed at the same cinematic spend-thrift crowd that turned the Twilight franchise into box-office alchemy. Adapting the love story between a longing, teenaged book-worm and his supernatural girlfriend with a curse, Oscar-nominated-filmmaker Richard LaGravenese (The Fisher King) clutters an ultimately simplistic story with complications that are neither all that compulsory nor compelling. It ends up anything but super or natural. STEVE GOW

A Good Day To Die Hard

Director. John Moore

Stars. Bruce Willis, Jai Courtney,
Sebastian Koch

The original Die Hard is an '80s classic. A near perfect mix of action, humour and Bruce Willis' charisma, it was a claustrophobic thriller set inside an office building. Since then the movies have slowly opened up the action, becoming more generic with every added location. The new film sees Willis in Russia joining forces with his CIA operative son (Jai Courtney). It has exotic locations and a body count that would take a mathematician to calculate, but none of the wit or style of the first film.

Oscar host: the world's hardest job

Seth MacFarlane.

Family Guy creator takes the reins from Billy Crystal this year — and is banking on not being invited back

Seth MacFarlane GETTY IMAGES

Despite getting advice from Billy Crystal and working as hard as he can to prepare for hosting duties at the Academy Awards, Seth MacFarlane thinks his hosting gig is a "one-off" and that he'll be "flayed by the press" no matter what he does.

Speaking to reporters Tuesday from the Dolby Theatre, where he'll host the 85th annual Oscar ceremony on Feb. 24, the entertainer was alternately confident and self-deprecating.

"I'm not feeling a lot of pressure from myself," he said. "There is sort of a comfort in knowing that no matter what you do, you're going to get the same reactions in the reviews. So I could put on the worst or the best show in the world and I will still be flayed by the press."

Still, he said he's spent five months trying to strike a comedic balance that will satisfy the fans of his animated shows and the comparatively highbrow audience inside the Dolby Theatre.

"I've set myself up for the hardest job in the world because the fans of Family Guy and Ted and the shows and whatnot that I do are expecting one thing. If I deliver that, this crowd will walk out," he said.

He promises to add bite to the show — "The whole point of their bringing me on was to give it a little bit more of an edge" — but acknowledges there will be a lot of ego in the audience.

"You have a room full of people who are at the top of their game — they're successful, they're being honoured, they're attractive — and yet this is also the group with the thinnest skin on the planet," he said, "so it's a tough group."

The 39-year-old entertainer said Crystal gave him some helpful advice, including "get comfortable with your shoes before you go on stage."

MacFarlane will sing during the show and is also a nominee for his original song for Ted, but said he expects to lose the category to Adele.

He's aiming for "very much a classic Oscars with a much more current edge," and said, "It's impossible to work any harder than I have in preparation for this," but he still doesn't think he'll be invited back.

Bocelli sets the mood for Passione

Love songs from the Mediterranean.

Legendary opera singer talks to Metro about reconnecting with songs from his youth

scene@metronews.ca

With his latest album, Passione, Andrea Bocelli has put together a collection of love songs from the Mediterranean, most of which he sang in piano bars during his formative (read: not yet famous) years in Italy.

The songs on this album seem easier to sing.

It's easy for me, but the difficulty is in the expression that you have to put in these kinds of songs, because the original interpreters of these songs are the best singers of the world. So I have to be very careful to put all my heart into the interpretations.

Tell me about when you used to play these songs in piano bars.

I began to sing pop music when I was 18 years old, more or less. ... Before, I sang and listened to only opera, because my passion is for that. But when I began to play in the piano bars, I discovered wonderful pages of music — of pop music. In a few months, I learned many songs, and I began to learn the most important and famous songs of the world like Strangers in the Night ... all the songs that I put now in these albums, because every song on this album is a beautiful memory of my youth.

Tell me about this album's duets with Nelly Furtado and Jennifer Lopez.

Those were mostly ideas that David Foster suggested. And for me, they were both beautiful surprises. ... They really are very expressive when they sing.

There seems to be a real Latin flair on this album.

The Latin world is (full) of great masterpieces. And after the great success that my previous album, Amore, had in the Latin world that was basically a collection of Latin songs, we thought it would be right to try to connect with that vibe.

You do a duet of sorts with Edith Piaf. She died when you were about eight years old. Tell me about your connection with her.

When I was a boy, I didn't know anything about Edith Piaf. ... But I did hear her voice, and ... it hit me deeply from the very first time that I heard it. ... And then of course, years later I actually learned more about her life ... and I realized that since she had some varied and very deep experiences in her life, this definitely must have helped her in becoming so expressive with her music.

Do you pull from experiences to be more expressive?

Absolutely, yes. ... Each one of us sings what we are. And therefore we express through our voice what cannot be expressed through words alone.

It takes three to Tengo

As Yo La Tengo close in on 30 years as a band, the trio has secured their name as one of the most beloved and long-standing survivors in indie-rock.

While most of their contemporaries have already broken up and launched reunion tours, Yo La Tengo continue on their sonic journey without interruption, and with a legacy and longevity revolving around consistency — not so much a consistency of sound, as much as providing a standard in making great, timeless records that will go down in the permanent lexicon and discography of indie-rock music.

Beginning in 1984, and based around the husband-and-wife harmonies of founding members Ira Kaplan and Georgia Hubley, the addition of James McNew in the early '90s put the band in a unique position where each of the members was now a potential singer and songwriter, making their music all the more diverse.

They have scored films, appeared on numerous compilations and even dared to take their already underground following to more obscure levels by creating a garage rock cover band known as Condo F—s for anyone following along.

With the recent release of Fade, their 13th official LP, the band seems to have created one of their most thematic and

After 30 years, Yo La Tengo is still going strong with the release of their 13th album. CARLIE ARMSTRONG/CONTRIBUTED introspective records to date.

Beginning with the lines: "Sometimes the bad guys come out on top/ Sometimes the good guys lose/ We try not to lose our hearts/ Not to lose our minds," you get the sense that this is an album dealing with maturity and a search for answers.

And though the feeling seems to continue on throughout the record, the theme may not have been conscious at all.

"I probably would say it's not true," says singer and guitarist Kaplan. "But I could be lying. Although the songs are written over a year, the lyrics are not. The lyrics are written very quickly.

"We tend to sing along in a sort of nonsense kind of way and even record the songs without lyrics and at the last second come up with them. I think because of the speed and the concentrated space in which the lyrics are written, the songs end up talking to each other. But in no way is there a plan. It just sort of takes shape the way it does organically, not with a concept put behind it."

Community theatre celebrates milestone 100th season

The Ottawa Little Theatre (OLT), the longest running community theatre in Canada, has produced more than 1,000 plays in its history and this year, celebrates its 100th season.

Joe O'Brien is a director, former president and board member of the Ottawa Little Theatre. He has been involved with the theatre for nearly 60 years.

He says that, in a lot of ways, the theatre hasn't changed over the years but says, in some ways, it has.

"I think the biggest change is that, when I first started in the '50s as a student of the theatre, the Ottawa Little Theatre was the place to be seen. It was always filled with all these ladies in furs and gentlemen in tuxedos. I think we've become more of a community theatre than it was perceived many years ago," he says.

Like O'Brien, John Muggleton, director of marketing and communications for the Ottawa Little Theatre, shares a long history with the theatre — his mother was just 15-years-old when she acted in her first play at the OLT, a play that was directed by Joe O'Brien.

Muggleton says, today, the biggest challenge facing the 100-year-old theatre is technology.

"Any theatre's biggest competition is Best Buy and Future Shop because those stores are designed to keep people indoors," Muggleton explains.

"Everything they sell is telling people you don't need to leave the house — here's a giant TV, here are some video games, movies and computers. That's really our challenge — getting people to leave the house."

To celebrate its 100th season, the Ottawa Little Theatre is presenting popular plays from every decade of the theatre's existence — Ten Great Plays from Ten Decades — including Pride and Prejudice, Deathtrap and Steel Magnolias.

Like Muggleton, O'Brien hopes people who have enjoyed the OLT over the years will continue to support the theatre, which he calls "one of the most necessary cultural organizations in the city."

"It's given me a place to play but, more than that, it's trained so many people and offered so many opportunities for actors, directors, designers, technicians, some who have gone on to become professional," says O'Brien.

"My hope is that will still happen."

Freaks, geeks and taxidermy

Freakshow. AMC departs from scripted fare like Mad Men with new series on Venice Beach 'freaks,' comic book geek-chat and competitive taxidermy

"Wonder is still alive," says Todd Ray. "People are still curious." Ray sure is. Wonder and curiosity led him to bail on a flourishing career as a music producer seven years ago to indulge his passion for the odd.

Today, with the enthusiastic participation of wife Danielle, teenage son Phoenix and daughter Asia — along with their extended family of wondrous exhibitionists — Ray is the impresario of a freak show on the boardwalk of Venice Beach, Calif.

And, now, they're all poised to become TV stars, thanks to Freakshow, an unscripted series premiering Thursday at 9:30 p.m. ET on AMC.

The Rays invite viewers to meet the gang, and — don't worry — it's OK to stare at Amazing Ali, the miniature woman; Goth-fashioned Morgue, whose bag of tricks includes plunging a drill bit up his nose; Marcus "The Creature," whose body is a tableau of tattoos and piercings; and George, who, at seven-feet-eight-inches, is, well, the resident Tall Man.

Even Asia Ray has gotten into the act, transforming herself from a dutiful student and aspiring classical musician into a radiantly charming fire-eater, sword swallower and contortionist. Music school can wait. The Freakshow calls.

Granted, much of the reality-show genre could be branded a freak show, with the likes of Honey Boo Boo, Snooki and The Real (pick your city) Housewives freak-ing out for the cameras.

But in Ray's lexicon, "freak" isn't a bad word at all. "We're all freaks of the universe," he says, meaning everyone on the planet Earth. "We're all individuals so unique that we're actually magical creatures."

No wonder he celebrates people who are even odder than most. During a recent interview he explains that, "when they join us, they're respected and they're treated well."

Ray says the series explores why they do what they do as

New lineup

Some viewers may wonder what an unscripted series like Freakshow is doing on a network known for feature films and acclaimed dramas like Mad Men and The Walking Dead. But Freakshow isn't AMC's only departure from scripted fare.

- On Thursday at 9 p.m., Comic Book Men resumes its second season of informed geek-chat originating from filmmaker Kevin Smith's New Jersey comic shop, Jay and Silent Bob's Secret Stash.
- Then, at 10 p.m., following Freakshow, AMC will premiere Immortalized, a wondrously odd competition show. Let other competitions settle who can rustle up the best grub or shed the most pounds. Immortalized focuses on taxidermy.

performers, "and, if they're born uniquely different from most people, how they cope with the struggle against the 'normal' world — how they deal with society that puts them on the outside."

How should the "normal" world deal with them in return? "You can look at those who are different from you and be excited about them," Ray says, "and then you can look in the mirror and be excited about yourself."

Southland. King battles sleep deprivation — both on and off the screen

When Southland returns to TNT on Wednesday, viewers will see the character of Los Angeles police detective Lydia Adams as a new mom desperately in need of sleep.

"She's not juggling things so well. Motherhood is not coming naturally," said actress Regina King, who plays Adams.

"I think Lydia has always been one of those (people) who has been pretty good at everything she's done, so I wouldn't say that it's coming as a shock to her, it's just a lot. She didn't anticipate having a colicky baby, so she's not getting any sleep, and that affects everything, especially being a detective."

Off-camera, King can definitely relate. She's not a new mom, but she's been pulling double duty, directing and acting in an upcoming episode of the acclaimed series.

"It's tiring because as a director you have to be thinking about everything," she said.

Willis only hits the bottle a bit now

Bruce Willis admits he used to have a drinking problem, leading to a brief foray into complete sobriety, but he's past all that now. "I had been sober (for a while)," he tells GQ magazine, explaining that he eased off his personal prohibition "once I realized that I wasn't going to run myself off the pier of life with alcohol, drinking vodka out of the bottle every day." As for his current drinking habits? "I have wine now, mostly when I eat," he says. Of course, Willis is still facing the unstoppable march of time. "Nobody wants to hear this bad news, but we're all dying on some level," he says. "I'm going to try to keep this machine moving forward as much as possible and not have to think about the eventuality of becoming more frail and less able to do the work. I know that I'm not going into politics. That's not an option."

Swift response to exes, Underwood

Taylor Swift

Taylor Swift had more exes on her mind at the Grammys than just Harry Styles, whom she mocked during her performance of We Are Never Ever Getting Back Together. The lovelorn singer also made a point of avoiding ex-boyfriend John Mayer and his current squeeze, Katy Perry, despite being seated near each other, according to Us Weekly. And as for reports that Grammy organizers were ordered to keep Swift away from rival Carrie Underwood? "Taylor feels Carrie is always rude to her, so she steers clear of her," a source tells the magazine, pointing out that "after Carrie performed, Taylor didn't stand. Everyone else did."

Hugh Jackman: Nope, not gay

THE WORD
Dorothy Robinson
scene@metronews.ca

Just because he has a deep love of musical theatre, lives in the West Village and has an older wife does not make Hugh Jackman gay. In an in-depth interview with The Hollywood Reporter, the Australian star addresses the gay rumours that constantly swirl around him. "Just recently, it bugs her," Jackman, 44, said about what his wife of 16 years, Deborah-Lee Furness, 57, reads online. "She goes: 'It's big. It's everywhere!'" His X-Men producer Lauren Shuler Donner even went on record with the magazine to talk about their marriage. "I have seen him with Deborah since the beginning of their trip to Hollywood, and I've been on five movie sets with him and have never seen him stray, have never seen him eye anyone," she said. "I met him when he did Oklahoma! (at London's Royal National Theatre in 1999). He was genuine, hugely talented. He was in love with his wife that day and still is."

Doth thou protest too much? Who gets their producer on record to talk about the state of their marriage?

See? I'm doing it too! Why can't we believe that a drop-dead handsome, successful matinee idol can be happily in love with someone not on his level, looks-wise? Also, aren't we at the place in society that he could come out if he wanted to? Or am I just dreaming big here?

Gaga's pain puts concerts on hold

Lady Gaga has postponed her next four concerts because a joint inflammation condition called synovitis has left her unable to walk, she revealed on Twitter. "I've been hiding a show injury and chronic pain for some time now. Over the past month it has worsened," the singer tweeted. "I've been praying it would heal. I hid it from my staff. I didn't want to disappoint my amazing fans. However, after last night's performance I could not walk and still can't." Makeup dates for the cancelled shows — in Chicago, Detroit and Hamilton, Ont. — have yet to be announced.

London calling: Theophilus and the finer things

The song and pants. Young artist helping to usher in an era where hip hop and High Street go hand in hand

life@metronews.ca

"Kids used to want to be rappers, but now they want to be fashion designers, which is cool. It's an education," says Theophilus London.

The New-York-based rapper is talking about his legions of fans and network of starry friends, which he refers to as "kids."

But in terms of the music industry, London, at 25, is still a youth himself — though a savvy one.

In fact, he's probably had more magazine and newspaper profiles (GQ, Esquire, Elle, The New York Times) and fashion collaborations (Cole Haan, Stüssy and Surface to Air) than he's had musical airtime.

And he can name drop with the best of them. Solange Knowles is "like family, like a sister."

He casually mentions seeing mood boards out at Kanye West's house. Those are some impressive connections considering that London, who was actually born in Trinidad, has only released one album, an EP and a selection of mix tapes.

Usually the lucrative endorsement spoils are rewarded after years of toil, making records or movies. However, London has managed to capitalize off of his personal style and cool credibility first.

"Rappers used to be wearing Air Jordans. I still wear them. But now, the progressive kids are more educated and wanting Givenchy, Rick Owens or Alexander Wang. And Kanye's clothes — they're dope," he says.

While London is answering my interview questions from the set of a Chevrolet commercial, he swears he approaches it all with a strategy and awareness that extends beyond the next commercial paycheck.

"I'd never do anything with McDonald's, for example. They're not moral," he says. "I have my own agenda."

For now, that includes a new album coming out this summer and planned collaborations with Azealia Banks and Frank Ocean.

"I never do things just for the money. I have to believe in it."

Independently inspired

A studied approach to style

"The black suit and hat that I'm wearing on the cover of my first album, Timez Are Weird These Days, was inspired by Leon Ware (the writer behind Marvin Gaye's 'I Want You' record). I got a lot of work off of the back of that. I know how to dress. I have a look and I don't need a stylist to tell me what to wear," London said.

Trinidadian-born American rapper Theophilus London now calls Brooklyn his home. HANDOUT

FAMILY FUN

Thursday, February 14, 2013

Whether it's a backyard, lake or local community rink, lace up the skates with your family. Or visit a rink outside your city. Or you could get your family together and explore for a fun outing. COMSTOCK/THINKSTOCK

Time to enjoy the great outdoors

Activities. Canadian winters are perfect for families to get together to enjoy fun activities

VAN DEN BROEK
For Metro

With Family Day set in the middle of winter, perhaps this is a day to take advantage of the weather and head outdoors as a family.

But what to do?

Here are four ideas for getting your crew outside.

1 Get Your Skates On:

Whether it's a backyard or local community rink, lace up those skates and hit the ice. "Or make a point of visiting a new rink outside your city. You have your local ones but there are some rinks worth driving to," says Minnow Hamilton, co-founder of the savvymom.ca site. Those in and around Ottawa should make the trek to the 7.8-kilometre-long Rideau Canal. Other winter favourite activities include heading to your local toboggan hill.

2 Bring Summer To Winter: Try introducing your family to a summer sport in the winter. Think snow soccer or, Hamilton suggests, Frisbee golf or even geocaching.

3 Get Creative: Ann-Marie Burton, the Burlington, Ont.-based founder and president of the Momstown.ca groups, suggests putting food colouring into spray bottles to spritz the snow different colours or taking snow and making snow faces on trees or the sides of a brick house. "One of our chapters in Red Deer also took bubbles outside and the bubbles freeze mid-air and sometimes also on the wand," she says.

4 Explore Together: "You could do an outdoor scavenger hunt in a park or around your house," says

Tracie Wagman, the Toronto-based publisher of Help! We've Got Kids. "Or if you have a beach not too far from you, I know our family likes to go to the beach in the winter — we find it fun to see the water and how crazy it can get." She also suggests looking for a public farm or gardens that you can wander through as a family.

Play a board game with your family if you want to unplug your electronic gadgets for the day. STOCKBYTE/THINKSTOCK

Ditch the distractions

VAN DEN BROEK
For Metro

With many of us hooked up to our iPhones, PlayBooks, DS gamers, Kindles and more, it's easy to drift apart as a family. But perhaps this Family Day, you and your unit should consider unplugging for the day.

Why Unplug?

"There is a different vibe that happens in your family when everyone's unplugged," says Ann-Marie Burton, the Burlington, Ont.-based founder and president of the Momstown.ca groups. "When you're not distracted, then you're more present in body and mind and you're noticing what is happening," Burton also points out that five years ago being unplugged simply meant turning the TV off. Today, it's also about deactivating from all of our computers, phones, gadgets and video games, too.

How To Unplug?

Well, there's the obvious tactic of confiscating all gadgets and phones and locking them up somewhere for the day. But there might be a better way of going screenless.

"Have a discussion with your family prior to the day about going unplugged so then expectations are set," Burton suggests. "Because there's nothing more disappointing to a child than to be told that they can't do their favourite things on a random whim."

And once you have your family's buy-in, begrudgingly or not, make a plan, suggests Tracie Wagman, the Toronto-based publisher of Help! We've Got Kids. "I find the more you plan with children, without over-planning a holiday, the better, because children get bored easily," Wagman says.

"But also build in some down time. Let them sleep in and spend a few hours in the morning just hanging out in their rooms or just playing together, for example."

Fresh ideas. Throw a themed party for a memorable time

VAN DEN BROEK
For Metro

Need a fresh idea for Family Day? Why not throw a party and invite a few other families? Better yet, steal one of these themes to make your get together truly memorable.

Colour Party

"You could have a colour theme to your party, where everyone comes in their favourite colour and bring a food in that colour as well," suggests Tracie Wagman, the Toronto-based publisher of Help! We've Got Kids.

Around The World Party

At home, every once in awhile, Wagman spins the globe, picks a country and, together with her children, tries to make a dish from that country. So why not expand that idea to a party? "You could do that with your friends where everyone picks a country and brings a dish from that country," she says.

Pick a country for a recipe-themed party. CREATAS/THINKSTOCK

Belated Valentine's Party

Feel like delaying the love-in event? Defer a Valentine's party, Hamilton suggests, where you theme your games and foods around the annual day of love.

Oscar Party

Got older kids on your hands? "Why not try an Oscar party?" suggests Minnow Hamilton, co-founder of the savvymom.ca site. After all, with the annual movie awards coming up on Feb. 24, you could rent a movie or two to watch with other families, serve popcorn and set up movie-themed decorations.

Superhero Party

Invite your guests to come dressed as Superman, Wonder Woman or their personal favourite superhero. Or steal a page from the movie The Five-Year Engagement and set up a "make-your-own-superhero" party.

Even you can have a stylish kitchen

Trendy. Useful stylist tricks to make your kitchen look fabulous

With so many kitchens being designed smaller in size and open concept to fit our living spaces, it's important that they function well but look good at all times.

From someone who staged, propped and styled rooms for magazines and television shows for many years, here's a few stylist tricks to make your kitchen — no matter how large, small, high-end or low-end — look great at all times.

Repackage

Put packaged necessities in attractive display containers. Your favourite pasta, granola and espresso beans can be stored in decorative containers and displayed on the counter or behind glass doors.

Hint:

When displaying storage containers like baskets, jars or boxes, rely on the repeat method to help simplify the overall look. Using three to five of the same containers will allow a kitchen to look less eclectic.

Small scale

Look for space-saving countertop appliances in a small kitchen. Small and efficient appliances will save space and still offer up all the conveniences of a large kitchen.

Stand tall

Stand up trays, cutting boards and platters to hide unattractive backsplash. Choose fun shapes and trend-setting colours to help bring a boring kitchen to life. They even work standing up in the back of an open shelf or inside a glass-fronted cabinet. Got a really ugly backsplash? Try leaning a long dressing mirror horizontally across the back of the counter.

No faux pas

Mix artificial plants with real herbs/flowers. Every kitchen, no matter what size, needs a lush look. Adding real herbs and small plants with faux will extend the lush look long after the herbs have been used up and the next shopping day is near.

Tray it

Keep everyday items clustered on a tray. A tray filled with your morning French press, artificial sweeteners, bean grinder and your favourite mug will not only keep the counter looking tidy but keep you organized in the morning. Another tray with olive oils, dried herbs, vinegars, salt and pepper keeps the stove side organized for action.

Are you wearing colourful chemicals?

Non-toxic nail polish for Valentine's Day is so much sexier.

If red nails are part of your valentine's plans, show yourself some love and choose a non-toxic option.

Many Canadians mistakenly believe that since nail polish is widely available on store shelves and since it sports no warning label, it is free of health risks. Unfortunately, this isn't the case.

Although cosmetic producers in Canada are required to disclose product ingredients, they don't have to warn you about the health concerns associated with those ingredients.

According to the David Suzuki Foundation, 80 per cent of cosmetics contain at least one ingredient linked to health and environmental concerns.

Your bottle of nail polish likely contains at least three.

When shopping for a new bottle of Cherry Red, take care to avoid the following common chemicals of concern found in nail products:

1. Dibutyl phthalate (DBP)

Used as a plasticizer to prevent nail polishes from becoming brittle, this phthalate is classified by the EU as a suspected endocrine disruptor. In children, it's associated with liver and kidney failure when sucked or chewed. For this reason, Health Canada banned the use of DBP in soft vinyl children's toys, but its use in cosmetics is not restricted.

2. Formaldehyde and formaldehyde releasing ingredients

The International Agency for Research on Cancer classifies formaldehyde as a known human carcinogen, but there are no restrictions on the use of formaldehyde-releasing preservatives (like DMDM hydantoin, diazolidinyl urea, imidazolidinyl urea, methenamine, quaternium-15 and sodium hydroxymethylglycinate) in nail polish. Formaldehyde itself is allowed in concentrations up to five per cent in nail polish hardeners.

According to the David Suzuki Foundation, 80 per cent of cosmetics contain at least one ingredient linked to health and environmental concerns. ISTOCK IMAGES

3. Toluene

Toluene is a paint thinner that adversely affects the central nervous system when vapours are inhaled. According to the Canadian Centre for Occupational Health and Safety, short-term exposure can lead to temporary loss of coordination and headaches, confusion and dizziness. Repeated exposure presents more serious health risks. Ironically, it's also a skin irritant and prolonged contact can cause dermatitis.

Luckily, you can have your cake (or heart-shaped candy) and eat it too.

In recent years, non-toxic nail polishes have made a splash in the cosmetic world, making it simple to enjoy a manicure without the toxic worries. Reading the labels is the place to start. For brand recommendations, The Environmental Working Group's Skin Deep database is the absolute go-to. It's searchable and includes an extensive list of product ratings, ingredient disclosures and other resources.

Or, if a quick list of suggestions is more your style, check out Care2's recent list of non-toxic nail polishes.

KNOW YOUR RIGHTS AS A TENANT

As a tenant, it's important to know what rights you have and don't have regarding where you live. The Landlord and Tenant Board can help you since it administers the Residential Tenancies Act that sets out the responsibilities of both landlords and tenants.

In many cases, once landlords and tenants are aware of their rights and obligations they can resolve their own problems. However, if a landlord and tenant cannot come to an agreement on their own, then another responsibility of the board is to resolve the issue.

If there's a problem, landlords and tenants can file an application with the board. At the hearing, a member of the board will make a decision on the application based on the evidence presented. Or, if both the landlord and tenant agree, a mediator from the board can work with them to try to help them reach their own agreement.

The Act covers most residential rental units in Ontario including mobile homes, care homes and rooming and boarding houses. However, there are some situations where a rental unit may not be covered such as if the tenant must share a kitchen or bathroom with the owner, or family members of the owner, or the unit is used on a seasonal or temporary basis.

To learn more about about your rights and responsibilities, you can view or print all or parts of the Residential Tenancies Act from Publications Ontario's legislation online link at www.e-laws.gov.on.ca. You can also order a copy of the Act for a fee from Publications Ontario and get copies of the forms and brochures free of charge at any Landlord and Tenant Board office or at a Service Ontario Centre.

For more information, you can call the Landlord and Tenant Board at 1-888-332-3234 or 416-645-8080.

Valentine's Day comes but once a year, but Truffle Treasures' manager Sheila Carson said the store is ready.

"Our chocolatier has been very busy [preparing]," she says. Holiday treats get mixed into the regular plethora of sweets for chocolate addicts.

"People love the chocolate-dipped strawberries," she says, adding that the caramel-filled chocolate hearts and local gelato are also popular choices.

For the past 10 years, Truffle Treasures has been a mainstay in Ottawa. Founded by the late Lara Vaarre, the techniques and tricks of the trade have been passed down to create premium Belgian chocolate all made in their Westboro location.

Delicately spiced truffles such as Moroccan Mint and Cinamon Pear in a glass display case make the perfect gift in boxes of two or more.

"The truffles you get from us will have been made this [past] weekend. Everything is made fresh [and preservative-free]. They sell like hotcakes."

Her personal favourites include the crème brûlée and vanilla cream, though they also have a selection of sugar-free options. She recommends trying a chocolate and wine pairing as a possible date activity.

There is a wealth of chocolate barks to choose from (cookies and cream, cacao nib, sea salt, almond), but also unconventionally chocolate dipped sweets such as chocolate-covered gummy bears.

"We have a lot for kids, especially for moms buying for their kids for Valentine's Day," said Carson.

For the big kids at heart who love nutty sweets, Carson recommends the giant peanut butter cup made with creamy peanut butter centre surrounded by gooey caramels.

Alternatively, sip an indulgent hot chocolate in-store. "It's a good date spot," said Carson. The Westboro location has cosy nooks with leather armchairs and tables.

Making possibly the richest hot chocolate we've ever had, scoops of either white, dark or milk chocolate go into each cup in flavours in ginger and orange, pumpkin spice, hazelnut and more. We tried the Aztec hot chocolate with dark chocolate, cloves, cinnamon, cardamom, and chilies, and were on a sugar high the rest of the day. Top it with a dollop of whipped cream.

Romance never tasted so good.

February is for beer lovers

This weekend. Ottawa's first annual WinterBrewed Festival hits Sparks Street

JEFF O'REILLY

Ah Valentine's Day. Whether there is a song in your heart or a tear in your beer, this is time of a year when love is unavoidable. For me, that love is beer — or rather beer appreciation and discovery, so this weekend's first-ever WinterBrewed Beer Festival couldn't have come at a better time.

Now I'm not sure what it is about drinking outdoors that puts smile on people's faces — maybe it's just relief from cabin fever, but there must be something about that crisp cold Canadian air that makes people thirsty, as more than 11,000 people attended last month's Festi-biere in Gatineau. So it is with great excitement that the Sparks Street Mall will be hosting Ottawa's first outdoor winter beer festival this Saturday and Sunday. Presented by our friends who brought us the National Capital Craft Beer Week (and festival), you can expect to see 17 breweries presenting more than 70 different beers. It is almost guaranteed that you will find a new brew to fall in love with, and if you're looking for something completely out of the ordinary, my guess is you'll find it from Beau's.

Never one to do things halfway, Beau's celebrates February by releasing seven new beers. If you've never tried a gruit, then you're in luck, as they will have four to sample. What is a gruit? Well, long before anyone had discovered how amazing hops worked in beer, the ales of day were seasoned with savory herbs and spices and other ingredients that now seem almost unlikely to be found in a beer. Beau's Bogwater and later the extra-strong BogFather have embraced this magical alchemy for a couple of years now. New arrivals include Dubbel Koyt (a historical recreation of an Oatmeal Gruit) and Oiseau De Nuit (a collaboration with Dick Cantwell, head brewer from Seattle's celebrated Elysian Brewing that was brewed at last year's Oktoberfest). Cantwell's extensive work with pumpkin beers (I think he has brewed 36 or so completely different ones now) and Beau's expertise with the unusual gruit style seem like a match made in heaven.

Beau's Oiseau De Nuit (5.1% ABV) pours a clear dark orangey amber with a quickly fading off-white head. The nose finds intriguing fruity and herbal aromas with just a hint of spice in the background. Fruity sweet malts, caramel, earthy pumpkin, cumin, medicinal herbs and honey taste blend together for a truly unique taste. Light-bodied and very easy drinking with a short, dry finish — this is a great session beer for all you night owls and new beer seekers. Happy Valentine's Day!

If you're planning your romantic celebration for this weekend, these wines will be available at Vintages on Saturday.

Loveblock Pinot Noir 2011 (LCBO #313924, $28.95). It's not just the romantic name alone that makes this red a great choice for your Valentine. A product of Kim Crawford's organic/bio-dynamic venture, this wine hails from Central Otago in New Zealand — fast becoming the benchmark region for New World Pinot Noir. This is a very reasonable price for quality Pinot from the region, and will match well with a variety of dishes for your special dinner, or shine, on its own.

Casa al Vento Vin Santo 2005 (LCBO #305805, $28.95) A sweetie for your sweetie, this beautiful, golden desert wine, from the Tuscany region of Italy, is made from dried grapes. Look for raisin and other dried fruit flavours, as well as nutty notes. The classic pairing with a Vin Santo ("Holy Wine"), is almond biscotti — matching nicely with the nuttiness in the wine. Dunk the biscotti right in the wine, with an espresso on the side, to finish off your romantic evening. ALLYSON BYCRAFT

With all of the sweet and sticky candy and chocolate you may consume on V-Day, why not try something a bit lighter?

These brownies, which I created for the Mövenpick restaurant chain in Toronto, are only 140 calories and seven grams of fat per serving.

The cocoa, oil and yogurt that replace traditional butter and chocolate are the way to keep the calorie and fat count low.

If that's not enough to convince you to whip these up, consider that Mövenpick sells 1,500 of these brownies per month.

They're also now featured in my catering company and still rank as the number one dessert.

1. Preheat the oven to 350 F. Spray an 8-inch-square pan with cooking oil.

2. For the brownies, combine the sugar, oil, egg and vanilla in a bowl and mix well. Add the cocoa, mixing it in well. Add the flour, baking powder, yogurt and chocolate chips, mixing just until combined and smooth. Don't over mix.

3. Pour the batter into the prepared pan. Bake in the center of the oven for 15 to 20 minutes, just until set. Do not overbake. Cool on a rack for 15 minutes before icing.

4. To make the icing, place all the icing ingredients, except for the sugar, in a blender or food processor and process until smooth. Spread over the top of the brownies.

5. Cut into squares and garnish with a dusting of icing sugar, or drizzle melted dark and white chocolate overtop.

Sweet double choco mini cake indulgence

1. Coat eight 1/3- or 1/4-cup ramekins with cooking spray. Sprinkle about 1 teaspoon of sugar into each, swirling it around to coat the bottom and sides, then dumping out any excess.

2. Finely chop 2 1/2 ounces of the chocolate. Cut the remaining 2 ounces into 16 pieces, roughly the same size, then set those aside.

3. Bring a small saucepan of water to a bare simmer. Set a medium stainless steel bowl over it and add the 2 1/2 ounces of finely chopped chocolate to that. Heat, stirring occasionally, until the chocolate is melted.

4. While the chocolate is melting, in another medium bowl use an electric mixer to beat the egg yolks with 1 tablespoon of the sugar until they are thick and lemon coloured, about 4 minutes. Set the bowl aside and clean the beaters well.

5. In a third medium bowl, use the electric mixer to beat the egg whites until they form soft peaks. Add the remaining 3 tablespoons of granulated sugar, a little at a time, and continue beating until the whites hold stiff peaks. Set aside.

6. Remove the melted chocolate from the heat. Add the yogurt and stir well. Add the egg yolk mixture and stir well. Add one third of the egg whites to the chocolate mixture, stirring well, then gently fold in the remaining egg whites until they are just combined with the chocolate mixture. Divide the batter among the prepared ramekins. Cover and chill for 1 hour.

7. While the cakes are chilling, heat the oven to 325 F and prepare the sauce.

8. In a blender, puree the raspberries with the sugar. Pour the mixture through a mesh strainer, using a silicone spatula to press the pulp. Discard the pulp and seeds. Thin the sauce with water or with the reserved raspberry liquid (if using frozen berries) until the sauce has a nice pouring consistency.

9. Remove the ramekins from the fridge, tuck 2 pieces of the cut chocolate into the centre of each and bake in the middle of the oven for 15 to 18 minutes, or until just springy when touched. Let cool for 5 minutes, then unmould or serve in the ramekins. Serve drizzled with the raspberry sauce.

Blue Jackets make history with hiring of new GM

The Columbus Blue Jackets hurried to make history.

Just more than 24 hours after firing Scott Howson, they announced the hiring of Jarmo Kekalainen of Finland as the first European to be a general manager in the National Hockey League.

Kekalainen, director of amateur scouting with the St. Louis Blues 2002-10, held a news conference Wednesday in his native Finland at the same time the Blue Jackets held theirs in Ohio.

The 46-year-old, who played sparingly in the NHL, worked closely with Columbus director of hockey operations John Davidson with the Blues. When the Blues hired Doug Armstrong as general manager in 2010 instead of Kekalainen, Kekalainen returned to Finland to take over as GM of Jokerit in Finland's top league.

Als sign trio to 2-year extensions

The Montreal Alouettes signed two-year contract extensions Wednesday with linebacker Chip Cox and receivers S.J. Green and Eric Deslauriers.

Cox, an Alouette since 2006, was a CFL all-star from 2009 to 2011. Last season he led the club with four interceptions and was second in tackles with a career-high 82.

Green had a second straight 1,000-yard season, registering 61 catches for 1,111 yards and four touchdowns. Deslauriers caught 13 passes for 299 yards.

The Als also released linebacker Rod Davis and non-import kicker Derek Schiavone. THE CANADIAN PRESS

When knuckleballer R.A. Dickey joins a new club, he comes bearing gifts. Special catcher's mitts, courtesy of Rawlings.

But even with the bigger glove, Blue Jays catcher Josh Thole says hanging on to one of Dickey's deliveries is a challenge.

"We have no idea where it's going," said Thole, who came over with Dickey in a December trade from the Mets. "We can give it our best shot and I can guess, like I do half the time. But a lot of times, having the bigger glove helps."

The glove is also padded more, which helps when you're trying to snag a ball with a mind of its own. Just catching it is a success, never mind finding the sweet spot of the glove.

"Rawlings sends him loads of them," said Thole. "He just hands them out to all the catchers and lets them break them in and kind of play with them a bit."

Thole, 26, remembers his first attempt at catching Dickey. It was 2010 in the Mets bullpen and he didn't look very good.

"I missed the first three balls in front of the manager, the general manager and the owner of the team," he said. "I feel definitely like I've come a long way (since)."

Dickey's knuckleball is unique in that he throws it harder — at about 77 m.p.h. — than traditional practitioners of the floating pitch. And he has a few other pitches to help set it up.

That combination carried Dickey to the National League Cy Young Award last year when he went 20-6 with a 2.73 earned run average. He led the NL in innings (233 2/3), strikeouts (230), complete games (5) and shutouts (3).

Wrestling leader to argue for sport with IOC head

Olympics. 'The door is not closed,' says committee of 2020 removal

Facing a wave of criticism from around the world, IOC president Jacques Rogge will meet with the head of wrestling's governing body to discuss ways the sport can fight to save its place in the Olympics.

The IOC executive board dropped wrestling from the program of the 2020 Games on Tuesday, a decision that brought a sharp backlash from wrestling organizations and national Olympic bodies around the world — including Canada, the United States, Russia and Iran.

The move must still be ratified by the full International Olympic Committee in September, giving wrestling time to try to overturn a decision against a sport that dates back to the ancient Olympics and has been featured since the inaugural modern games in 1896.

Rogge said Wednesday he has been contacted by Raphael Martinetti, the Swiss president of international wrestling federation FILA, and was encouraged by the sport's resolve to make changes and fight for its place.

"We agreed we would meet at the first opportunity to have discussions," Rogge said at a news conference at the close of a two-day board meeting. "I should say FILA reacted well to this disheartening news for them.

"They vowed to adapt the sport and vowed to fight to be eventually included in the 2020 slot."

Wrestling, which remains on the program for the 2016 Olympics in Rio de Janeiro, still has a chance to stay on the list for 2020 — if it manages to respond positively to the wakeup call and convince the IOC to change course.

Family conflict

Man ordered to cough up Jets season tickets

How scarce are Winnipeg Jets tickets?

Scarce enough that a family went to court when a deal to split season tickets crumbled.

Queen's Bench Justice Morris Kaufman ruled Wednesday in favour of Darlene Gibb, the woman who said her brother-in-law reneged on their plan and refused to turn over the tickets as promised.

Kaufman said some of John Longstaff's statements didn't make sense.

"It's clear to me that this was a legal arrangement," Kaufman said in ordering that the season tickets be transferred to Gibb.

"This was a mutually beneficial contract."

Longstaff has been a hockey fan since 1973 and, because he had Manitoba Moose season tickets, he was eligible for Jets tickets when they replaced the AHL franchise in the city.

Curling. Ontario skip to enjoy home ice at Scotties

Ontario skip Rachel Homan showed in her first appearance at the Scotties Tournament of Hearts that she could hang with the top rinks from around the country.

She's set to make a return appearance at the Canadian women's curling championship, which kicks off Saturday in Kingston, and hopes to make more than just a playoff appearance this time around.

"We've been there before and we made it all the way to the semis our first time," Homan said of her 2011 showing. "I think this time our team has grown a bit, has got more experience and we expect to be right there hopefully battling in the final if we can."

At 23, the Ottawa skip is one of the best young players in the game. Her rink of third Emma Miskew, second Alison Kreviazuk and lead Lisa Weagle holds the third spot in the Canadian Team Ranking System.

Homan will also have a supportive Ontario crowd on her side when play begins at the K-Rock Centre. There are several experienced skips in the 12-rink competition, including defending champ Heather Nedohin of Alberta, B.C.'s Kelly Scott, Manitoba's Jennifer Jones and Nova Scotia's Mary-Anne Arsenault.

"It looks like a really tough field," Homan said. "Lots of teams with lots of experience, a lot more years than us. But we've had our fair share of finals and playoffs and TV games and things like that."

Homan posted a 13-0 record in the 2010 national junior playdowns and won a silver medal at the world junior championships that year. THE CANADIAN PRESS

NHL players hoping they'll lace up in Sochi

With one final flick, Sidney Crosby's 2010 overtime goal won Canada the gold medal and elicited national pride to the host country.

But will it stand as the last goal scored by an NHL player in the Olympics?

The nasty labour dispute long settled, the NHL can now focus on another lingering issue that needs a quick resolution. The NHL and NHL Players' Association have yet to agree with the IOC and the International Ice Hockey Federation to participate in the 2014 Sochi Olympics. With the opening ceremony set for Feb. 7, 2014, the countdown to the first face-off is ticking.

The 2014 Games, which run through Feb. 23, will feature more than 3,000 athletes. Players like Crosby, New York's Rick Nash, Carolina's Eric Staal, Chicago's Patrick Kane and other all-stars would love another shot at putting on the Olympic sweater for their home country.

USA candidate, is one of the hopefuls that said the NHL should play again in 2014.

"I think the fans want to see that," he said. "I think the players realistically would want to go do that. It's a once-in-a-lifetime experience, and I think we'd all be in favour of it."

The NHL has participated in every Olympics since the Nagano Games in 1998. All sides were set to meet Thursday and Friday in New York as they work toward a deal that would ensure the world's best players would again be showcased on sport's grandest stage.

The idea that the Olympics would be held in Russia, home of the KHL, with the NHL frozen out seems tough to imagine. After all, some of the league's top players are from Russia or have ties to the KHL.

After the rousing success and elevated ratings in Vancouver, IIHF president Rene Fasel stated it "would be wrong for the game, for the fans, not having the best players in Sochi."

Bettman's concerns

- The NHL is unhappy at ceding control of its players to the IOC and being barred from using Olympic highlights on its website.
- The league also receives no revenue from the telecasts and has no say on which cable station carries games.

Horoscopes

Aries

March 21 - April 20

It doesn't matter what you do today so long as you do something. If you sit still for more than a minute this morning, you may not get up again until the evening — and only to go back to bed.

Taurus

April 21 - May 21

There is no point trying to judge people by your own standards. They will never match up. The best you can hope for, today and any other day, is that they learn from your good example. So go on, be one.

Gemini

May 22 - June 21

The more others try to get you to change, the more you should stick with what you know and trust. No doubt they will come up with all sorts of reasons why you should take a risk, but don't do it.

Cancer

June 22 - July 23

What sounds like bad news is nothing of the sort. Chances are you are looking at it from completely the wrong angle. Facts are facts, of course, but even facts can sometimes be open to interpretation.

Leo

July 24 - Aug. 23

You are not the sort to give up just because you failed at something once. Yes, you may be annoyed that you did not do a project justice, but there is still plenty of time to do it again and do it right.

Virgo

Aug. 24 - Sept. 23

There is something you have to do today and even though it may be a total bore you know that until you see it through to completion partners and colleagues won't give you a moment's peace. Get started on it now.

Libra

Sept. 24 - Oct. 23

You may hear a few whispers or rumours today, most likely about someone you like. You are advised to ignore them. Most likely, it is just nasty he said, she said. Even if it is true, it's still nothing to do with you.

Scorpio

Oct. 24 - Nov. 22

Don't cut any corners today because someone important is watching and they will make a big deal of it. It may be that you have to do a lot of work for very little profit, but sometimes that's just how it is.

Sagittarius

Nov. 23 - Dec. 21

You don't have to put up with people who waste your precious time on trivial things. Tell them where to go today, and say it in a way that makes it clear you mean it.

Capricorn

Dec. 22 - Jan. 20

You may be eager to make changes but you won't be able to push partners faster than they want to go today. Which begs the question: Have you signed up with the wrong partners? Give it some thought.

Aquarius

Jan. 21 - Feb. 19

No matter how hard you try to persuade a friend or work colleague to see things your way, it just isn't going to happen, so give up. It's true, you know, some people are almost as stubborn as you!

Pisces

Feb. 20 - March 20

Other people may be selfish and put their own interests first but not you. With Mars, Mercury and Neptune all moving through your sign, you know it pays to be generous. The more you give now, the more you'll get later.
